

REPRESENTATIVE AGREEMENTS

Outline your wishes for health in British Columbia.

Brief introduction: The RSBC (Representation Agreement Act 1996, c 405) drew the outline to appoint a trustworthy legal representative that can make decisions for your healthcare in the case of illness, injury, or disability. In case you can't make healthcare decisions, you can appoint a legal person to take decisions on your behalf. This key for document legalization in Langley, Surrey, Delta, BC is for advanced care and personal planning.

OUR VALUES ARE THE REASON, WE ARE LEADING IN THE INDUSTRY.

THERE ARE TWO TYPES OF REPRESENTATION AGREEMENTS:

REPRESENTATION AGREEMENT SECTION 7 (RA7)

RA7 has standard powers for legal personal planning, for adults. This document can be helpful for immediate help, whose mental capability is in doubt. A representative agreement under section 7, has limited capacity to appoint the person.

For Example: In this case, Representation agreement section 7 allows his/her parents to help the adult.

REPRESENTATION AGREEMENT SECTION 9 (RA9)

RA9 enhanced the powers and gave the border powers to representatives. A representative has the power to deal with the complex matters that belong to the major personal and health care matters.

Section 9 covers minor and major healthcare decisions for surgeries, tests, and medications for an adult's comfort zone and personal care for living arrangements, diet, dress, and activities.

ADVANCE DIRECTIVES:

Unlike representative agreements in Langley, Surrey, Delta, BC, advance directives do not need to appoint someone for health care, rather you would make the decision itself. These legal documents include written instructions for giving/refusing consent for specific medical interventions. You do need to appoint a person to act on your behalf in the case of medical requirements.

To make the advance directives, you must be capable of understand the health care system, instruction deals, and the consequences of refusing and giving consent to such instructions. This document is useful if you and your family have different wishes or if you do not have your family appointed as a representative. Notary Signature on such documents enhances the credibility.

Note: if you become incapable, the health care provider would follow those instructions only. They will not appoint a Temporary Substitute Decision Maker.
