

Top Food Bloggers and Instagram Influencers in India You Should Follow in 2025

India is a fantastic food destination with an huge obsession that manifests primarily in social networks. Renowned as some of the best food creators in the country, they are redefining our approach to cooking and culinary customs. These influencers go far beyond simply offering recipes; they provide exciting culinary adventures and encourage innovative thoughts among those who enjoy cooking. This article will look at the top 10 food influencers in India for January 2025 and highlight what makes them unique.

1. Shivesh Bhatia

Shivesh Bhatia is a Delhi-based young pastry expert specializing in elegant-looking yet simple-to-prepare desserts. His blog "Bake with Shivesh" presents detailed recipe instructions for cakes, cookies, and other sweet treats. Among the accolades received by Shivesh are Vogue India's 30 Under 30 and Cosmopolitan's Blogger Awards' Best Food Feed of the Year. For gorgeous yet effortless desserts, visit his Instagram—it's an eye-and-taste-bud thing.

2. Nisha Madhulika

Nisha Madhulika, who is 65 years old, is a classic example of the fact that age is just a number. Her YouTube channel has more than 14.5 million subscribers, and she is known for sharing vegetarian recipes that make it simple to cook at home. Nisha emphasizes 'Ghar ka khana' or homemade food and provides comforting flavours to each recipe that she makes. Nisha was honoured with the Padma Shri Award in 2021, her channel is excellent for beginners and those who appreciate authentic Indian cooking.

3. Pooja Dhingra

Often referred to as the "macaron queen" of India, Pooja Dhingra runs Le15 Patisserie, an establishment that focuses on innovative desserts. She spent time at the renowned Le Cordon Bleu in Paris, where international techniques were blended with Indian ingredients for her unique creations. Besides being a baker, Pooja is also a storyteller who inspires women entrepreneurs. Her Instagram page is filled with vibrant images of desserts and great posts for anyone pursuing their dreams.

4. Vikas Khanna

Vikas Khanna is a true success story. The journey from Amritsar to obtaining a Michelin star in New York is surreal. His restaurant Bungalow received the Michelin Bib Gourmand Award in 2024, and he is also celebrated for his philanthropy. Vikas often shares his experience on platforms like MasterChef India, an undeniable fact that rigorous toil and perseverance bring rewards.

5. Ranveer Brar

Ranveer Brar is a chef who tells cultural and historical stories through food. He became an executive chef at 25, then explored all the spectrums, from street food to gourmet dishes. Ranveer's recipes and videos are for beginners or foodies seeking something special. His charisma and expertise formulate content that is enjoyable as well as informative.

6. Kunal Kapur

Kunal Kapur judges MasterChef India, and this chef can prepare the most wonderful, simple, yet enjoyable dishes. His video course and expert tips make cooking a fancy restaurant meal out of ordinary ingredients at home achievable. One of Kunal's leadership qualities is his creativity, which has made many people believe they can cook.

7. Saloni Kukreja

Saloni Kukreja is the food of Mumbai, which includes a mixture of fast food and food served in restaurants. Her photos are great for anyone passionate about exploring new tastes and destinations. Saloni's articles represent endless ways to try Mumbai's food variety phrased in a different light, for example, an eatery tucked away somewhere in the city or a new beat.

8. Harpal Singh Sokhi

Harpal Singh has come to be known as "Laughter Chef" by always being hysterical in the kitchen. The cooking-cooking program with his simplicity on the screen, "Turban Tadka," was so cool, and even "Namak Shamak" became the catchphrase that we will associate with his show. Harpal can cook at parties because of his friendly and funny character; even recipes are aimed at those who want a lot of fun in the kitchen.

9. Uma Raghuraman

Masterchefmom is her actual name, and she is known for showcasing South Indian and vegetarian foods. Her blog has been the means to remind and encourage families to pour their love into traditional recipes. She was honoured with the SAVEUR Blog award for Best Food Instagrammers! It is this kind of blend that Uma masterfully achieves, giving conventional and modern twists, which makes her favourite to all people who like healthy and juicy dishes.

10. Sanjyot Keer

Your Food Lab' is a recipe by Sanjyot Keer where he changes classic Indian comfort foods with the times and gives them a twist of modernity. His videos are like short, captivating movies that make you cook on the spot and succeed. People with an interest outside the standard way of doing things and those who enjoy visual art might come across his page as a must-see.

Conclusion

Indian food innovators are transforming our kitchen skills and dining experiences. They encourage us to prepare meals to prepare more healthily healthier meals and fridge to create entirely new meals. It doesn't matter if you are a beginner in cooking or a person with an addiction. These influencers are your best friends for cooking and baking throughout the year. Food influencers are known for their fabulous recipes that they steal from their families. Still, many take the extra step and prepare the gourmet dishes they feature on their blogs. Suppose you are starting or are passionate about cooking. In that case, these influencers will take you into the culinary world by giving you various mixed recipes you can try and novel tastes you can find. starting out or if you are passionate about cooking, these influencers will take you into the world of culinary by giving you various mixed recipes that you can try and novel taste that you can find.

For more information and to explore additional resources, visit our website at <https://www.devoutgrowth.com/blog/latest-food-influencers-in-india.html>

Discover how we can help your business grow with expert digital marketing solutions.

